Have you ever wondered what happens at a medi-spa? For many, the concept of a medi-spa is new. We spoke to Dr Alicia Teska, clinical director of the award-winning Skin Temple Medi Clinic & Spa, in Victoria. Dr Teska says a medi-spa should be an oasis of care, offering short- and long-term programs for your skin. For example, Dr Teska had a hamam (Turkish bath) built in her facility which offers exfoliating and softening care for the skin. The treatments are usually followed by a perfume rub and massage. Cosmetic enhancement and non-surgical treatments are also available at medi-spas. In Australia a doctor does not need to own a medi-spa, as they do in the USA, but there needs to be a registered health practitioner on the premises to perform the non-surgical cosmetic enhancement treatments, such as injectables and laser treatments. Dr Teska feels that there will be more medi-spas opening, as there is a real demand for these services.

AUSTRALIAN CAPITAL TERRITORY

My Genesis

This medi-spa is part of the CAPS Clinic, so treatments are performed under the supervision of plastic surgeon Dr Alastair Taylor. All of the aesthetic staff are qualified dermal therapists and nurses, ensuring patients receive the appropriate treatment, such as medical-grade peels, injectables and laser skin treatments, coupled with the highest standard of care. Every patient is given a treatment plan based on a skin analysis as well as their individual aesthetic needs.

TASMANIA

Sanctum Medical Aesthetics

All of the patients at Sanctum Medical Aesthetics understand they are under the expert care of Dr Asha Ram or one of her associates. The hero treatment at Sanctum is Thermage, which is used on the face and body with excellent results. The clinic's skin-rejuvenation programs, such as the New York medi-facial, include a skincare and treatment program tailored to the individual's needs. The team's affinity with aesthetics is extended to the facility's decor and on-site art gallery.
